About AFCP rising stars

The AFCP Rising Stars program is designed to honor individuals under the age of 30 who are emerging leaders in the free paper industry. This annual program will recognize up to 10 individuals who represent the best of our up and coming industry professionals. These individuals exemplify good character, leadership, and professionalism not only at work, but in the communities they serve.

AFCP Rising Stars will be asked to help the various initiatives of the association. This program has been developed to go beyond the recognition program, and provide long-term development opportunities for all recipients.

Nominee qualifications

These individuals should show the promise of and a commitment to impacting their publication and the industry in a positive manner through professional achievement. Nominees must also show they not only perform their jobs to a high standard, but they also have a commitment to furthering their knowledge and abilities. Nominees must actively work in the free paper industry for a member or associate member of

AFCP. Nominees must be 30 prior to December 31, 2009

Recognition program

Award recipients will be recognized in INK Magazine, the official publication of the AFCP

An awards presentation program will be conducted during the annual AFCP Conference held in Tucson at the Westin La Paloma Resort and Spa, April 22-24, 2010.

All award winners will receive free conference registration, meal plan, specialized training sessions, and free round trip airfare.
